Many students of specialized graduate schools, including medical and pharmaceutical students, are often drafted before receiving their diplomas. These former students are given three months military training after being drafted and are then commissioned second lieutenants, but in addition to their military training, these former students also continue their specialized studies in which they were engaged prior to induction at the following places:

Zegrze: for students specializing in electricity Pila: for engineering students Bydgoszcz: for aircraft engineering students Lodz: for pharmaceutical students Lodz: for medical students * Comment: the students' military and specialized training is concurrent. The probability of this implication is strengthened by the fact that graduated engineering students receive only three weeks military and political training after conscription, after which they are assigned to military units as army engineers with the rank of lieutenant.
